"Swarthmore College: One Swimmer, One Coach, One Fan."

Draped over the gleaming rail of the University of Miami pool, the banner struck terror and fear in the hearts of the grants-in-aid from Arizona and the scholarships from USC. Jackie Heineman '76 was back.

Last spring Heineman, daughter of Richard '48 and Joan Adams Heineman '48, had placed among the top sixteen women in the country in the national collegiate swimming finals to become the first Swarthmore woman to receive All American laurels. Doggedly pursuing the much-improved times for championship qualification, Heineman wrote record after record in her favorite breaststroke event, all without training tables and the Olympic-size pools accorded to her national competition. "Women's sports do not divide into small college or university championships," explained Heineman's mentor, Coach Sue Davis, a major factor in the success of women's swimming at Swarthmore. "Jackie was in with the best college swimmers in the country."

"You just really have to want it," said Heineman, "to put in the work you need for qualifying. Coach Davis was a great help, and so were my teammates, giving me encouragement when I needed it." And since her pre-teen days as a championship swim club stroker, Heineman has indeed desired to be the best, and to dedicate her time to—well, her times.

Teammate LeBriss Smith '76 is a similar story. Smith last spring qualified with Heineman and two other women on a relay squad that ventured to Arizona for the nationals and also took individual honors herself in several butterfly events in the Eastern Intercollegiate Championships. A Connecticut state champion for her age group while in high school, Smith has parlayed determination and dedication into a successful swimming career at Swarthmore.

Some weeks ago, there was some question over whether Smith would qualify for the Easterns again this year. Only one meet was left in which she could race, and even then her event was not scheduled as a regular part of the match. Undaunted, Smith took her place at the starting blocks for the 200-yard freestyle, against West Chester State's already-qualified pair of premier swimmers. But wait—this was not the event for which Smith needed to match her best time ever; she swims the butterfly stroke, doesn't she? Yes, she does, and she did. Churning up a tremendous wake, Smith took off after the West Chester freestylers swimming butterfly. Working on sheer determination, Smith actually led the race at the halfway point before slipping back in the final laps. To the tumultuous cheers of her proud teammates and an amazed West Chester contingent, Smith learned that she had topped her previous best time and was on her way to the University of Pittsburgh pool for a repeat show at the Easterns.

How good are Heineman and Smith? The women's swimming record board at Sharples Pool lists sixteen events for women ranging from relays to individual strokes. The names of Smith and Heineman appear beside all but two of those sixteen records.

Starting with the football squad's legendary win back in the fall, it has been a successful year for Swarthmore athletics. Several teams maintained winning traditions, and a few others began some of their own. This was typified by the outstanding success of the baseball nine, which came up a winner for the first time since 1951. Not coincidentally, 1951 was the last season for Dick Hall '53, who went on to major league stardom with several clubs.

The wrestling squad continued its string of excellent seasons with a 9-2-1 mark, including a first-place finish in the Lebanon Valley Invitational Tournament and a new season's record for team points, 392. Andy D'Amico '78 swept through twelve matches undefeated and placed second individually in his weight class at the Middle Atlantic Conference championships, while Dennis Dacey '76 also picked up a second-place at the MAC meet and finished his career with a 21-6-2 personal record.

Basketball and swimming for the men did not fare so well: The hoopsters could manage but one victory in the year despite a 15.0 average from Captain Bracken Rourke '77, while the swimmers could look with pride on Mark Tomsho '78, who competed in the NCAA Division III diving championships and upped his own Swarthmore diving records.

Women's sports in the winter showed two plus ledgers at the end, with Eleanor Hess's badminton squad posting its eighteenth winning season in the nineteen years Hess has been coach. In fact, for Swarthmore sports trivia buffs, the badminton team has suffered but two losing campaigns in its forty years of intercollegiate competition! A 20.4 points-per-game average from Wilma Lewis '78 and 10.6 from B. J. Entwisle '78 sparked the women's basketball five to five consecutive victories at season's end to chalk up a 6-4 mark. Speedy guard Lewis had a high game of 29 points in that skein, while Entwisle, who was also the team's leading rebounder, pumped in 18 for her high tally.

In celebration of the national women's lacrosse tournament held here over Alumni Weekend, the women's lacrosse squad swept to its 29th straight winning slate, topping Penn and Bryn Mawr on the way to a 6-3 mark. Liz Gilbert '77, who had a better-than-five-goals-per-game average, topped all scorers and earned herself a place on the Philadelphia All College first team at center attack. The coed archery squad won its first meet in two years, edging out Bryn Mawr-Haverford on excellent shooting by Randy Grant '77 and Beth Youse '78, both of whom eclipsed their best marks from last spring several times. Women's tennis captured a 5-2 record, with a large measure of thanks to highly-touted Sandy Gilson '79, a former Delaware state champion. Living up to her advance notices, Gilson swept through seven matches undefeated at first singles, while Coach Bertie Landes' first doubles pair of Deb Burns '78 and Rachel Pocinki '78 posted five victories in seven tries. And despite a winless spring, the softball squad boasted three hitters over .400; Sandi Liotta '78, who hit safely in all seven games, Becky Stamm '79, and Diana Hollister '76. Joan Sedlak '76, the squad's stalwart pitcher, also managed to bat .346 for herself.

Coach Bill Cullen's men's tennis squad sewed up their seventh straight MAC title with an 8-1 victory over Northern Division champ Upsala on their way to an 11-5 mark against top-notch competition. Cullen's charges have now won 43 consecutive MAC matches and—are you ready?—110 of their last 111. This spring the netmen captured impressive wins over William and Mary and Colgate, two University Division opponents. The doubles team of John Irwin '77 and Larry Davidson '77 took MAC honors in that event, marking the third time Irwin has traveled that route, and top singles player Alan Petrine '77 placed third in the MAC singles play after winning the crown for the past two seasons.

To top that, when the NCAA Division III playoffs came, the Swarthmore tennis team took third place, and that unstoppable doubles combination of Irwin and Davidson won the championship!

Glenn Swan '76 shot an outstanding round of 72 in the MAC golf championships, carrying the Swarthmore duffers to a 12th-place finish among twenty-one colleges entered. Swan's consistently strong game was the high point in Coach Willis Stetson's last year as mentor of the links squad. Men's lacrosse fell on hard times, showing only a victory over Stevens in eleven attempts; Scott Killary '77 was the squad's leading point man, with a total of 25 on the year. Pete McGinness '76 took a second place in the pole vault to lead the track team to an eleventh-place finish at the MAC championships. McGinness earned himself a return trip to the Division III National Championships late in May with his season's performance. Excellent two-mile performances by John Devlin '76, who won the MAC indoor championship in that event in the winter, also highlighted the year for the thinclads.

And then, there was baseball . . .

"Widener's field's too wet. Playing here."—the message read on the Parish bulletin board, cryptic only to those who had been unaware of what this game meant for the baseball nine. Quite literally, the championship of the MAC Southern East Division was on the line; and to a bunch of hungry men headed for an excellent season, a winning mark simply was not enough.

Pre-game meeting in the locker room. Some tense, some loose, all daring to add more hope than they should. "Hey, this Widener dude hasn't been beaten since high school," and a chorus of "so what's" and deleted expletives.

Out on the field, players mass by the dugout for the meeting. Spiritual leader Andy Deacon '79 solemnly intones, "There's no place like home . . . there's no place like home . . . there's no place like home," referring to the change in game site. Mike Sweeney '79 getting the nod at third base, looks down to find himself clicking his heels three times. By the time the team breaks, the Swarthmore side of the bleachers is filled; this is something different.

On the mound for the Garnet is a man who perhaps catalyzed it all with his confidence and gung-ho manner. Rick DiFelicianantonio '79, a typesetter's nightmare, has been psyched for this game: "I play against a lot of these guys in summer leagues, and I'm gonna get them." Glove nervously ticking at his side, energy shooting off in all directions, DiFelicianantonio sets down the Widener batsmen with ease in the first, and brings a roar from the crowd. Rick's mother has another attack of agita.

Swarthmore falls behind, with some marvelous defensive play preventing a big inning for the Chester visitors. Bottom of seventh, the Garnet pecks away at the two-run deficit. One run tallies in the seventh, Jay Clark '78 an instrumental factor. The lacrosse crowd comes over as the stickmen finish their game; even the Mower Man idles his tractor in left field. Bottom of eighth, and Swarthmore scores again. Widener counters with a new hurler who shuts off the Garnet, but not before the tying run crosses.

DiFelicianantonio is pitching smart. Eleven innings is one strain on the arm, and Widener picks up a run in the top of the inning. The crowd doesn't fold: "Go! Go! Go!" cascades from the bleachers as the Garnet steps up for a do-or-die inning. Sweeney leads off with a hit; John Jacobson '78 follows with another. An out. DiFelicianantonio slaps a grounder to short; the throw to second gets Jacobson, but Jacobson gets the second baseman with an excellent take-out slide. The throw to first is wild, and Sweeney comes all the way around to score. 4-4. Called after eleven innings to allow Widener to get back for dinner. When it was Swarthmore that was the hungry one.

Despite dropping a decision to Widener later in the year, Swarthmore had proved its point. Twelve wins, six losses, one tie; it had been a long time since the Garnet could look back on such a season. It could only happen here, too, that the biggest game in a much-emphasized winning season was a tie.

The Year in Sports

A renewed excitement about sports stirred the campus in 1976-77: Intramurals engaged half the student body, while intercollegiate competition brought national and regional honors to both teams and individuals.

By Bill Squadron '77

Sports at Swarthmore experienced a reawakening in 1976-77. From progress toward building a new gymnasium, to participation of over half the student body in an expanded intramural program, to continuation of vigorous intercollegiate activities, a rejuvenated awareness of the importance of athletics in the Swarthmore experience swept administration buildings and dormitories alike.

The most unmistakable sign of aroused student interest was the formation this year of the Swarthmore Intercollegiate Athletic Association, marking a significant step toward student input into athletics. The organization was conceived by Student Council member Jon Gerson and became a reality through the efforts of football star Rob Chang, top diver Mark Tomsho, and field hockey standout B. J. Entwisle. The idea excited enthusiasm among the athletes, who saw it as a means to express student opinions on crucial issues in Swarthmore sports and also as a respected and recognized liaison between the students and the athletic departments and administration.

The organizers also hoped to encourage the administration to act more swiftly in the athletic domain. "We want to ensure the healthy survival of athletics in general at Swarthmore College, and intercollegiate athletics in particular," says Rob Chang. "We don't feel students can leave it up to the administration and physical education departments to do it. The administration has too many other priorities, and the athletic departments are understaffed. S.I.A.A. is a vehicle to safeguard student concerns."

Co-chairpersons Entwisle and Chang organized the male and female athletes for a first meeting in January. Some thirty athletes representing all sports attended, officers were elected, and committees were established to study the problems which the association deemed the most serious: (1) the club system that badly needs revamping, (2) a permanent resolution of departmental leadership, (3) sports coverage in the College newspaper and yearbook, (4) new facilities, and (5) ensuring high quality coaching at Swarthmore. The group also plans to become involved in other matters such as organizing support for the teams and arranging for bus trips to away games. And most importantly, says Chang, the S.I.A.A. should "provide a channel of communication for people with even routine problems—to point them to the right people and voice our concerns in the right places."

This renaissance of feeling was not restricted to varsity athletes. Over half the student body participated in an expanded intramural program administered and organized by the newly-formed, student-run Intramural Council, with organizational support and equipment furnished by the Department of Physical Education and Athletics for Men. The enlarged program offered co-ed competition in volleyball, flag football, basketball, and softball. With this experimental year having proven an enormous success, the Council plans to include soccer and tennis among its intramural activities for 1977-78.

Meanwhile on the playing fields, Swarthmore intercollegiate teams continued to dominate in some sports and play catch-up in others, and individuals gained regional and, in some cases, national honors. In women's sports, hockey continued to dominate the scene, lacrosse broke even, and Liz Gilbert won All-College recognition in both sports. Men's team results ranged from glorious triumphs in wrestling and tennis to disappointing seasons in soccer and swimming. Bill Rawding was named Swarthmore's first All-American wrestler, and senior Larry Davidson was runner-up in the singles championship in NCAA Division III tennis competition. And on one beautiful weekend in May, star pitcher Rick DeFelicianantonio won from Haverford both ends of a doubleheader to clinch the Hood Trophy for Swarthmore for the ninth consecutive year.

Fall Sports

That was a fitting finale, but the year had begun in September with Gilbert leading Coach Pete Hess's hockey squad, perennial Garnet winners, to an 8-2-1 season. The team whipped Penn 2-1, tied West Chester, and handily defeated Widener, Villanova, and Bryn Mawr. Gilbert was not the only player honored: Jeanne Gibson, in addition to her selection on Philadelphia All-College II, was named to All-College III, Brenda Perkins to All-College IV, and Sue Rech to All-College V.

The women's tennis team, playing in the fall for the first time, missed standout Sandy Gilson (on exchange to Rice) but still won five of its eight matches. With Sue Almassy, Wilma Lewis, and Cathy Bardos playing superbly, the squad recorded 5-0 shut-outs against Widener, Bryn Mawr, and Villanova. The volleyball team also registered a big victory over Bryn Mawr on its way to a 7-5 season. Senior captain Pat Hill lent her experience to a young but extremely talented group featuring sophomores Tracey Brown, Becky Stamm, and Susan Phillips, and freshman Amy Halio.

Coach Tom Lapinski's football team continued to show evidence of rebuilding and climbed out of the MAC cellar for the first time since 1970. Lapinski, in his second year as architect of the Garnet gridiron turnaround, directed the squad to a 9-3 victory over Ursinus and a 16-16 tie with Johns Hopkins. The team came very close in several other contests, suggesting that a .500 season is just around the corner.

The football future is rosy indeed, primarily because of the most talented group of freshman players that Swarthmore has seen in years. They will return next year, masters of Lapinski's potent Wing T offense, an exciting attack that turned Rob Chang loose for gains of 168 and 170 yards rushing in 1976. In addition to anticipating Chang's return, Garnet fans can look forward to more excitement from receiver Gerry Riley, who electrified crowds last year with his breakaway kick returns and pass receptions. And stalwart linebacker Jeff Leinberger, All MAC honorable mention in 1976, will anchor the defense once again.

Visions of another NCAA tournament danced in the heads of Swarthmore's soccer team after they defeated last year's NCAA entry John Hopkins 1-0 to run their mid-career record to 4-2. But the squad dropped four of its last six games to make Coach Joe Leitner's first season a disappointing one.

But the future outlook is bright because of an amazing "brothers" act: Steve Schall, Bill Foley, and Dave Andres all have brothers among Swarthmore's soccer standouts—Larry '75, Dave '77, and Ken '75—and Tom Gilbert's sister Liz stars on Swarthmore's women's teams. Their return, plus next year's play by All-League co-captains Jim Harvey (handicapped by a painful hip pointer in 1976) and Johann Waplinger, should return Garnet soccer to its accustomed place among MAC leaders.

Cross-country success has become so expected that people hardly notice it anymore. Joe Stefanowicz's squad performed with its usual excellence, but it showed unusual depth: Luis Cifuentes, George O'Hanlon, Ben Fields, and Jim Rupert all finished first at one time or another. Rupert, in particular, improved tremendously and was Swarthmore's top finisher in the MAC championships, in which the team placed seventh among nineteen competing schools. One unforgettable highlight was the thrilling 27-28 victory over Widener.

Winter Sports

Gomer Davies celebrated his twenty-fifth anniversary as Garnet wrestling coach with a 13-4 season, a Lebanon Valley Tournament championship, and a cluster of new Swarthmore grappling records. The squad accumulated more points than ever before in seventeen matches and finished fourth in the MAC championships, the best showing in the College's history.

One outstanding individual was sophomore Bill Rawding, who recorded an undefeated dual match season and set five Swarthmore records. He became the school's first All-American wrestler by capturing fourth place at the Division III National Tournament. Joining Rawding in 1976-77's undefeated ranks were junior Andy D'Amico, who was named MVP of the Lebanon Valley tourney, and freshman Bruce Grasberger.

After its disastrous record of 1-20 last year, the men's basketball team returned to respectability with a 7-13 season that allowed an outstanding group of freshmen to gain valuable experience. Greg Berlin, Doug Perkins, Gary Silverman, and Phil Raymond should brighten the Garnet basketball future for the next three years. They will miss the services of senior Eric Montgomery, the hustling MVP and leading scorer of this year's squad.

Only the personal heroics of Bill Booth and the promising performances of several freshmen salvaged a winless campaign in men's swimming. Co-captain Booth broke the school and pool records in the 200-yard individual medley, while the potential of Rich Ballot, Mike Brown, and John Kelly offers hope for victory next year.

The women's swim team fared only slightly better than the men's. After losing top swimmers to graduation, injury, and illness, Swarthmore managed victories over Temple, LaSalle, and Immaculata. Senior breaststroker Anndy Dannenberg enjoyed an outstanding season, and freshman Kathy Pearce made a strong debut as the team's best freestyler.

Junior Wilma Lewis, with a thirty-point season high, led the women's basketball team to an exciting 54-42 win over Widener. Wilma, who averaged 19.8 a game for the season, also led the Garnet to a fourth-place finish in the Brown Invitational Tournament, and both she and Janell Schweickert were chosen for the All-Tournament team. Wilma had help all season from senior Mary Lou Dymski, who averaged ten points a game, and freshman Amy Halio, the team's floor leader and defensive star.

The women's badminton team suffered only its second losing season in twenty years, despite the consistently strong efforts of Gail Grubelich, Cassandra Thompson, and Terri Pyer. In All-College squad for the fourth straight year, was also named to the position of first team center on the United States Women's Lacrosse Squad—the first Swarthmore woman to be so honored. Brenda Perkins also gained All-College recognition.

Men's lacrosse enjoyed its best season in four years, highlighted by victories over Dickinson, Muhlenberg, and Lebanon Valley. Peter Harmeling and Scott Killary led the scorers, and Jeff Leinberger had a great year on defense.

A 91-54 rout of Haverford was the high point of the men's track season. Nate Hoberg set a Swarthmore record in the javelin, and freshmen Mike Brown and Bill Foley were an exciting one-two punch in the 880. That duo is sure to star on the College's cinders for another three years in what promise to be exciting track seasons.

Swarthmore's golf team was led by Sandy Foster, and the season's highlight was a victory over Widener. Freshman Mark Taylor and sophomore Mike Brown, encouraged by enthusiastic new coach Lee Jenkins, showed tremendous potential.

Opening the season with only one proven starting pitcher, Swarthmore's baseball team found three more and compiled its best record in over a quarter of a century. The squad beat Drexel twice (the first time ever) and swept that big double-header from Haverford to clinch the Hood trophy.

Two of the new pitching stars, Gray Moon and Andy Deacon, will be back next year, along with the sensational left-hander Rick DeFelicantonio, whose 6-2 mark included a no-hitter against Washington. Deacon also was the top Garnet batter at .366, and star catcher Jay Clark also will return next season.

Swarthmore's top 1977 sports story may have been the remarkable performance of the perennially remarkable tennis team. During a warm week in Jackson, Mississippi, just days before graduation, four seniors—Larry Davidson, Mich Glouchevitch, John Irwin, and Alan Petrine—played superbly to win the NCAA Division III championship, to give Swarthmore its first NCAA team title in history. In addition, Davidson was runner-up in the singles, beating teammate Glouchevitch in the semifinals.

During regular-season play, Swarthmore recorded its first victory over Penn in years and extended its undefeated skein to eight years in MAC play. Davidson, who had an incredible year, registered a 20-1 singles mark and won the MAC title without losing a set. He was closely followed by John Irwin (16-2) and Alan Petrine (12-4), who combined to win the MAC doubles crown, bringing Irwin an unprecedented fourth MAC doubles crown and Petrine a third conference title, when added to the singles championships he won in his freshman and sophomore years.

one of the year's highlights, Gail teamed with Kevin Porter to advance to the mixed doubles semifinals of the Eastern Intercollegiate Tournament.

Spring Sports

Coach Irene Moll's women's softball squad, winless in 1976, turned things around immediately with an opening game victory, 8-7, over Villanova. The young team also crushed Ellen Cushing Junior College, 18-1, for its other win. Becky Stamm (.407) and Wendy Weinberg (.424) led the hitters, while Stamm and Nina Lloyd provided the pitching heroics.

Led by talented Liz Gilbert, who scored thirty-eight goals, the women's lacrosse team compiled a 5-5 record. Gilbert, chosen to the Philadelphia

The Pirates of Penzance

Pirates of Penzance seemed a contest between Gilbert and Sullivan and Swarthmore's own Sandy Foster and Judy Berry. Foster and Berry won! Yey, Swarthmore!

This codpiece of operetta takes a mindless premise that an equally mindless lad, Frederic, mistakenly indentured to a group of orphaned pirates, is able to seduce the daughter of a Major-General merely by reciting the plight of his young life. The daughter, Mabel, rhapsodically, falls for Frederic, splitting his loyal soul (remember the subtitle-Slave of Duty-get it?) between the pirates and Mabel's Daddy, who wants the pirates brought to justice. I don't remember quite how, but somehow, there is a happy ending.

(sing to the tune of the Lord Chancellor's nightmare song)

When you're doing a show
And you've one week to go
And repose is tabooed by anxiety,
I conceive you may use
Any language you choose
To indulge in, without impropriety.

For the scheduling's hell
And last week practice fell
When the football team won for the first time
And the next one is due
For this Tuesday at 2
And you couldn't conceive of a worse time.

And the tech isn't done
And it's getting past one
And you've been there rehearsing since daylight (With a brief break for lunch)
And you're getting a hunch
That it may keep on going till midnight.

I O L A N T H E

It's the 5th time they've run
Through the march in Act I
And Act II hasn't even begun yet
And your new blister stings
As you help put out wings
And there's 21 pairs to be done yet

And your wand isn't there
(For your crown has a tear)
And it's hard to perform with conviction
When the flats are all falling
And Gary keeps calling
For volume, reaction and direction

You're a regular wreck with a crick in your neck and you've two papers due and you're getting the flu and you're tiding low and your room is a mess and your leading role's weak and your voice has a squeak, you've fatigue that's chronic and a general sense that your work has piled up since October

But then it's time to take part and to perform as if at last
And it goes like a dream
And you're in a hush and you're here
And you're not really sad when it's over

Oktoberfest

The flashing sounds of trumpets.

The crisp rat-ta-tatting roll of drums.

The spit and polish of a precision drill.

The pagentry of a college half-time.

The spirit of Chico, Groucho, and Harpo.

Quesenbery Leaves:

Blackburn Heads Sub Search

by Rob Gurwitt and Scott Swinton

In an announcement on Monday, November 15, William Quesenbery resigned his post as Dean of Admissions, effective immediately. Undertaking his duties until a new dean is selected are David Walter and Lynne Schloesser Mifflin, former Assistant and Associate Deans, respectively.

Dean of the College Thomas Blackburn has become chairman of the Committee on Admissions and Scholarship (C.A.S.), replacing Quesenbery. He will also work with the Admissions staff and will chair the selection committee for the new dean of admissions.

Quesenbery attributes his departure to emotional exhaustion. "I just ran out of gas," he said. He noted that once he had made the decision to leave, earlier this year, it became more and more difficult to give the needed commitment to the job. Contributing to this have been his need to face personal difficulties over the past several years which have taken both time and energy away from his job.

Other sources have pointed out, for example, that his interest has been flagging. In the last couple of years, interview appointments with Quesenbery have been scheduled no earlier than 11:30 a.m., and it was generally assumed that if he hadn't arrived by 11:00, the interview should be postponed. One student has commented that Doug Thompson, former Associate Dean of Admissions (now at Brown University) was the one who "ran the show." Dean Blackburn, asked to evaluate Quesenbery's work, replied "I think the College has maintained its academic standing."

Quesenbery's plans for the future remain nebulous. Foremost among the projects he is considering is writing. He envisages augmenting his dissertation on W.H. Auden, and/or writing criticism on Sir Gawain and the Green Knight, and Finnegan's Wake. If he were to do any more admissions work, it would be only at a college with a very different admissions formula from that at Swarthmore, such as at a state university.

In taking over their new responsibilities, Schloesser and Walter plan to make no major alterations in either admissions policy or in the decision-making process. "We don't feel we're in a position to make any major changes. We can't shake the rafters." They do, however, plan to democratize all decisions within the office staff; in several cases last year, Quesenbery was the only one to deliberate and make a decision.

Current admissions policy remains as nebulous as Quesenbery's plans for the future. Former president Courtney Smith described what Swarthmore seeks as "the student who is bright and . . ." Dean Blackburn notes that there are "real dangers in attempting to make

Wang Elected Next Sem's Editor

In a well-attended election for next semester's Phoenix editor, senior Penelope Wang was selected out of a roster of four candidates.

Of over 80 students invited to vote (on the basis of participation in some aspect of the production of this semester's paper), 64 attended. Candidates Lewis Lazarus, Harry Margolis, Darryl Mitteldorf, Bill Squadron, and Wang presented their positions on the paper's structure and editorial policies, and afterwards were questioned by those in attendance. During the presentation, Mitteldorf announced his support for Wang and withdrew from the election.

In the vote that followed, Wang received a clear first-round majority, with 34 of the 64 votes cast. Lazarus was runner-up with 17 votes, followed by Squadron and Margolis, respectively. Wang will assume her duties in January.

Morgan Tenure Decision — Review of Aftermath

by America Rodriguez

On September 29, President Friend informed Kathryn Morgan that the Board of Managers had accepted the recommendation of the Committee on Promotion and Tenure and granted her tenure.

The CPT had originally decided not to recommend her for tenure last spring. At that time the administration said the reasons for the denial of tenure was 1) the college was unable to expand its offerings in folklore and folklife studies, Kathryn Morgan's field, 2) the CPT was not convinced of her ability to teach advanced Afro-American courses, and 3) they questioned the intellectual significance and quality of her scholarship.

The present procedure for review of appointment and renewal decisions, as outlined in the Faculty Handbook (February, 1975) calls for a preliminary explanation of the denial, an explicit oral statement and if the candidate is still not satisfied, a full review of the decision by the CPT.

When the Kathryn Morgan case reached the review stage two new elements were introduced. First, History Department Chairman Harrison Wright wrote a letter to the Provost on July 15 informing him that Morgan had had two articles accepted by the Journal of American Folklore and the Journal of Ethnic Studies. Second, on June 14 the Provost received a review of Morgan's scholarship (that he had requested three weeks earlier) from "a very distinguished folklorist of a prominent university." The President informed Morgan of these developments on August 13.

Members of the CPT contacted refused comment, citing reasons of confidentiality.

Four people have requested a review of

GOSPEL CHOIR

Sunday evening realization of a precious Afro-American art form.

Struggles to learn our different voice parts

When we did and sang all together — a wonderful warm feeling that we put everything into it that we had to make the song live

Our songs didn't last for just one night but as often as we were with one another and felt like singing

The Gospel Choir was a so the rush to get ready for concerts

the wait for everyone to get together and into cars

the anxiety, hopefulness, apprehension that always seemed to be there before we opened our mouths to sing

But no matter what happened during concerts or rehearsals we

a ways managed to put beauty and feeling into the songs that sang

Black Dance Ensemble

The Swarthmore College Black Dance Ensemble, an organization that has been actively functioning for approximately five years, provides an opportunity for cultural identity and understanding. Black Dance Ensemble members combine their creative talents to demonstrate a realm of black expansion, from traditional African Cuban to contemporary modern dance.

In essence, the Black Dance Ensemble seeks, through weekly practices and annual concerts, to enlighten our culture, our community, and ourselves.

UPWARD BOUND

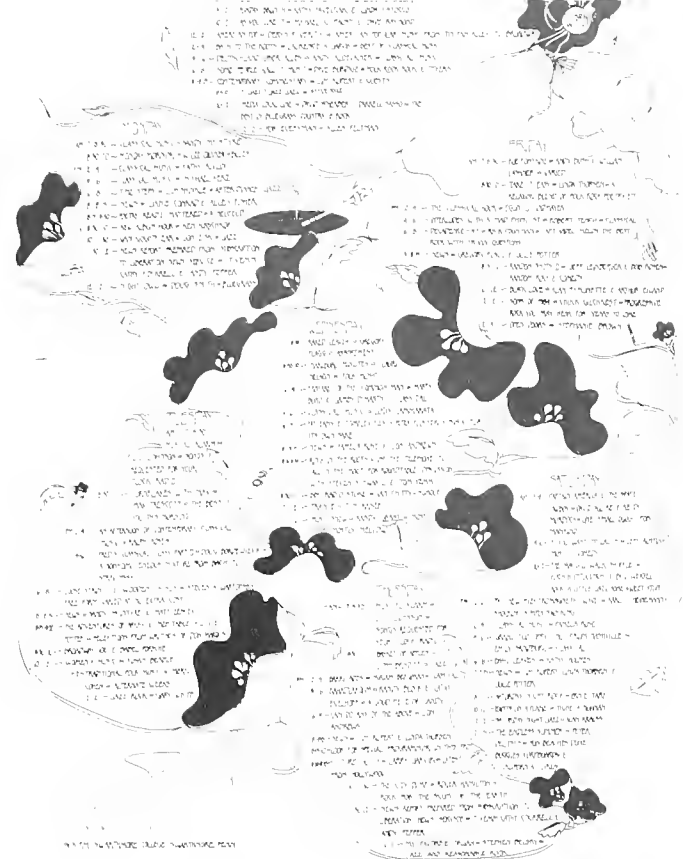

Upward Bound is a program designed and dedicated to instilling a feeling of motivation in the Black youth of America; to achieve the educational standards that are so necessary for success in this vastly technological society.

Under the guidance of Mr. and Mrs. Collins, and with the help of Swarthmore student tutors and counselors, the S.C.U.B. program has been responsible for achieving productive lives for many Chester students through education.

By enabling so many Chester students to attend college, who might otherwise have never utilized their talents and abilities, U.B. has demonstrated its invaluable dedication to the welfare of Chester's community; a dedication that today has become all too rare.

WSRN

Alex is a 17-year-old student operator. He will be 18 on his birthday. He is a member of the WSRN staff and is responsible for the station's programming.

Approximately 20 students are currently involved in keeping WSRN on the air. The station is located in the basement of the school building. The staff is responsible for the station's programming and for the maintenance of the equipment.

RECYCLED THOUGHTS

SING TODAY A PLAIN SONG
Sing today a plain song:

The world sat once in the tension of waiting, when stars and words mingled in winter:
barely whispered then in the darkness, no more than a prayer and a prayer's answer.

Words have echoed down the long ages, Joy is proclaimed, and lost, and recovered;
we too await, and pray in the waiting, Hope's renewal, Love's rekindling.

Matthew Abbate

Three views of a Dancer

Flesh is a circle.
So the leg rises
Points to the press of her body
So descends.
 Wind in the oak's head
 Evokes the lion
 Raging with two feet upon the ground
And she, circling across the wood floor,
Also states no escape.

 All things seek their surface
 Man his skin
 The dance the man it cycles in
And she, her arms extended,
Turns again,
Breath by breath
Repressed.

 An oval of muscle
Across her belly passes.
 Oak leaf
 Ascending from oak crown
 Into the brown rape of earth
 Condemns you
These muscles seem
A drift of petals in a spring wild stream,
That body
A drift of shed flowers
Dreaming resurgence.

Mr. Fixit

Having repaired
I now retire
Treading awful
Softly water.
Haven provided Entertainment
I now decline myself
In draped ruin
By cluttering clothes
Papers repelling
In disordered array
My thoughts interrupted
By entropy.
Makeshift radio
Wired to wall
Makeshift life
In academic hall
Makeshift love
Scarcely at all
Makeshift poetry
Of sterile despair
Makeshift turntable
Temporary repair
Futility glorified
Stop
Stop
Stop
Where?
Just don't blame
Anyone but me.

John Rodgers

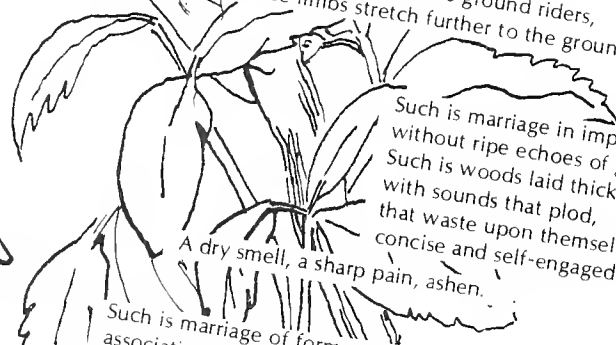

Laundromat

And pressed against a pane of glass to stare he breathed himself a spot, transparent then.
Reflected mouth and lips absorbed the air.
Above the street he gazed and breathed again.
His mother's voice with others fell beyond.
Machines, fed nickels, droned on dirty wood.
While streaming sidewalk figures meshed, he yawned,
and cast to passers verdicts, as he stood.
Condemned deformed or old moved out and in.
He scrutinized a life within the pack;
a ragged, tilted, limper made him grin
But through the glass the twisted face smiled back Avoiding eyes the boy turned fast and chose to find his mother where she folded clothes.

In Betrothal

The pale-streaked sky stretches against gray twigs as dull in color as sound, that reply neither to sky nor dumb ground riders,
but to me, whose limbs stretch further to the ground.

Such is marriage in imperfect woods,
without ripe echoes of green or blood.
Such is woods laid thick with sounds that plod,
that waste upon themselves,
concise and self-engaged.

A dry smell, a sharp pain, ashen.

Such is marriage of forms, association of substance and gender,
both of earth stable and of category firm.
With sure meaning; and justly formal.
For there is rest in such sharing of nice start and fine end.

But how be these sticks so shallow in black leaves and yet with red buds mount upon the air?
These spears trim and like to burst at touch,
should speak or sing ripe verse.
We know the same in hearing that same sound.
I breathe, we swell new-limbed.
And I both priest and bride here am consumed with aural organ's rage and sound.

Maqueda

You think to play with power over me,
With coyness cold to strip my foolish pride;
I swear it matters little that I see
My passionate ambivalence denied.
Not still beneath your beauty you remain,
Though loneliness is plain our cherished lot,
Accused of every sin that I could name,
And several more I'm sure that I could not.
The pact of self-destruction has been signed,
I cannot spare the wit to wish you well,
So you go your way, I'll go mine,
To very private heaven, or to hell.
If I could rouse indifference in your breast,
Perhaps yet we'll put coyness to the test.

Vice, the fine, of flesh or mind,
belies and yet begets its price;
joined like coin to eye and hand,
demands its lease on lip and loin,
and bound without a sound contracts,
extracts its merchant's flesh to pound:
twice the blood, and money, sold in gold still lost the cost of vice.

Mallards on the Crum

Emeralds flashing
the glint of diamonds
sun on ripples
lapis above the trees
Spring is not made of stone.
It is the flow of muddy water
the squish of mud
hidden under dead grass
the paths of mud
earth and water, wind and fire forth of barren branches
the chirring
of dried leaves
still clinging against the wind above the airport lights
there is a splash of milk

There are mallards on the Crum.
They feed from my secrets —
I do not know if I caught the emerald flash
they feed
a muddy water
The sky is beyond approach not a mineral approach
Spring is not made of stone.
There are mallards on the Crum.
Emeralds flash.

LOVE FORBIDDEN

come through my other door you cannot open this one come with your old eyes come on my hour of death
and be wary let no one be behind for a long time I have been hiding in this house
I changed my name I am living with another name day and night I am using black spectacles
come through my other door you cannot open this one come just before dawn come with all your eyes
I am oxidizing behind the shutters inside me calamities are born autumn is born
I cannot make out your voice on the phone your face glides past my fingers and is lost so always something snaps something breaks come just before dawn come with your old eyes
come through my other door you cannot open this one
and be wary let no one be behind and nobody loves me any more they have painted my loves with big violins my fears were orphans all along am I a solitary couplet I am drenched a revolver rounds off my novel the play is over my lights are put out come as if you had never been come on my hour of death
come through my other door you cannot open this one it was locked and sealed on me
and be wary let no one be behind

GOOD MORNING

Wrists limp and slender, curled as round as petals
that bend over lissome stalks
in the fresh dew-laden hours.
Waves of brown silk cascade over smooth polished shoulders seeking some soft hollow in which to lay, a still pond.
Chestnut eyes flutter at the early-born day,
and the form stirs a landslide of sheets;
a hand blooms faithfully sunward,
sweet smile presses against the air.

FEAST

My life has turned into a party table, abandoned.

All of the guests have put on their wraps and exited —
snowflakes cling to bright red lips and fur collars.

The cigarette butts — drowned in hissing reluctance — color dregs in wine glasses'
lipstick — kissed and finger — printed.

Northern Spy apple cores turn from red-veined white into motley brown.

Crumbs of chocolate cake spot the cloth,
ground in by a stained and wayward coat sleeve.

Perfume, sweat, and the odor of hair remain.

Mingling with the orange peels and steak grease.

A reckless feast

left wasted and abandoned.

ADIDAS

Another year has just passed by and I had thought it would be a milestone but all there was were some pebbles all tossed behind —
A few knocked me down ...
I got back up
and kept on gettin' up but the thing that really sent me off track was the fact that I stayed on the same path ...
I have a sneaking suspicion that I just went around in a full circle
and now that I'm back to the starting point
I'm ready to run the race again.
I damn sure hope
it's a different course

SPECIAL AWARDS

The Ivy Award, established by Owen Moon, Jr., '94, is given to the men in the Senior Class who are judged by the Faculty to have shown the highest degree of leadership based upon character and scholarship. For 1977 it has been awarded to BRADFORD GENTRY and ROBERT GEORGE.

The Oak Leaf Award was established by David Dwight Rowlands, '09, and continued in memory of him by Caroline Lukens, '98. It is placed in the hands of the Faculty to be awarded each year to the woman member of the Senior Class who is outstanding for loyalty, scholarship, and service. It has been awarded for 1977 to PATRICE DAVIS.

The McCabe Engineering Award, founded by Thomas B. McCabe, '15, is presented each year to the outstanding engineering student of the Senior Class. It has been awarded for 1977 to KATHERINE L. HARPER.
